team, and to create software products with the utmost efficiency.

I am a computer scientist in training. Currently studying at James Madison University. Possesses skills in many languages from Java, to C, to HTML, and more. I am acquiring hands on experience on developing programs, websites, and applications. Hoping to use these experiences to become a software engineer or a web developer. I am a very hard working individual who ensures the code that is developed is to the utmost quality and I enjoy when the code that I write can be put into good use. My goals are to become a reliable developer of any sort, able to flexibly work with any
